

RESOURCE GUIDE EXPECTING & PARENTING YOUTH IN CENTRAL EAST MISSISSIPPI

TEEN HEALTH
MISSISSIPPI

MISSISSIPPI
STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Information on the Pregnancy Assistance Fund (PAF)

What is PAF?

This guide has been developed with support provided by the Office of Population Affairs (OPA) Pregnancy Assistance Fund (PAF) Program. The PAF Program is a grant program that aims to improve the health, educational, social, and economic outcomes of expectant and parenting teens, women, fathers, and their families. Since 2015, OPA has provided funding to the Mississippi State Department of Health (MSDH) to support its work with expectant and parenting teens. MSDH currently works closely with partner organization, Teen Health Mississippi, in a grant-supported collaboration to increase public awareness and education about the services available to expectant and parenting teens, women, fathers, and their families. One strategy to achieve this is the development of this guide.

How to use this guide?

This guide was developed based on input from expectant and parenting teens and service providers throughout Mississippi. They helped by telling us about the information, resources, services, and support that were most needed for themselves or to support a teen during pregnancy, after delivery, and while parenting. This guide gives general information anyone can use, and then more detailed information based on different areas of the state. This guide is intended to help expectant and parenting teens, women, fathers, and their families find resources and information they need to support a pregnancy and raise healthy families. This is a starting point to help you think about your pregnancy, your baby's birth, and being a parent.

The guide has information that might be helpful now and later. There is information about caring for yourself, what to expect as a parent, information that can help you with school, and information about family planning and birth control methods should you decide to wait a while before having another baby. At the end of the guide is a list of resources that are in or near your area.

Table of Contents

As a young person who is expecting or a current parent, you might have some questions, which is why this guide has been created. This guide should help you find things like medical care, housing, job training, and other information and resources you might need.

Caring for You

Pregnancy and being a parent leads to a lot of changes in a person, both physically and emotionally. It's okay to feel a little (or a lot!) overwhelmed by these changes sometimes. The important part is knowing how to handle these feelings in a way that is safe and healthy for both you and your child. Below is information about some of the things to expect and ways to care for yourself and family during this time.

Body Changes

Some (but not all!) of the physical differences a person might notice during pregnancy include:

- Weight Gain
- Breast Swelling
- Stretch Marks
- Fatigue
- Swollen Feet
- Shortness of breath
- Mood Swings
- Morning Sickness (nausea)
- Cravings

Eating healthy foods, getting regular exercise, and staying away from alcohol, tobacco, and drugs are great ways to keep healthy. With so many changes happening, both physically and emotionally, make sure to check that the food and exercise you enjoy are good for you. The best way to do this is talking to doctors and nurses, and reading from accurate sources, like the websites listed below.

Mississippi State Department of Health: Healthy Pregnancy

Postpartum is the time after pregnancy and delivery. During this time, a person's body is trying to recover from all the changes that occurred during the past several months. Most recovery is around 6-8 weeks and depends on the health of the person during pregnancy and childbirth, among other things. Each pregnancy and birth is different, so recovery will also vary as well. For people who have recently delivered a baby, it is important to see their doctor for their post-partum appointments to make sure their body is recovering well. Many doctors will want to make sure new parents have the support they need to ensure they and their families are healthy. This may include talking about plans to have another baby soon, or perhaps wait a while, and help make a good plan for either.

Emotional Changes

A person's hormones go through a roller coaster of changes both during and after pregnancy. This can result in mood swings from time to time. Many expecting and parenting young people find themselves getting upset or sad more easily than they used to. If a person finds this happening to themselves, they should talk to their family, their doctor, or another trusted adult about how they are feeling.

For the first few days after giving birth, many people experience what is known as "baby blues." This happens when the changes in hormones and the lack of sleep cause a person to feel overwhelmed and tired. Sometimes, the "baby blues" become something more serious. Postpartum Depression is a mood disorder that can affect people after birth. They can experience feelings of extreme sadness, anxiety, and exhaustion. This may make it difficult for them to complete daily activities or taking care of themselves or the baby. If a person is feeling any of these symptoms, it's important they reach out to their doctor or nurse who will know how to help them through these feelings and get them the support they need.

The National Help Hotline is a free, 24-hour, 365 day-a-year service for people to call to talk about any issues you may be facing. Don't hesitate to call to talk to someone about getting help: 1-(800) (662) 4357

Stress Trips

Being a parent can be fun and exciting. But it can also be overwhelming and can cause you to lose your cool at times. When you feel the stress bubbling up, that is a sign to take a break. Below are some tips to help you stay calm and find your cool again:

- Take a deep breath.
- Close your eyes and count to 10.
- Put your child down in a safe place and step outside the room for a few minutes until you feel calmer.
- Ask for help. It's okay to let someone else help with your child from time to time.
- Even though you have a little one to take care of, you still need to take care of YOU. Take time every day, even if it is just for a few minutes, to do something you enjoy. It can be a hobby or alone time.

Caring for a newborn can be overwhelming and stressful for new and experienced parents. Frequent crying is normal for newborns. Crying increases around 2-3 weeks, reaches its height around 6-8-weeks, and becomes less frequent around 3-4 months old (12-16 weeks old). When your baby is crying a lot, it can be difficult and confusing, especially when you can't figure out why. When your baby is crying, remember to be gentle as they are very fragile. Any bouncing, shaking, or rough handling can be harmful to a baby. It is important to step away if you feel yourself becoming too upset about the baby crying. Take time to calm down or have someone else care for the baby to give yourself a break. Remember that the baby crying is part of their development. They are learning how to communicate, and when you respond in a gentle way, they learn they can depend on you to take care of them.

The Rights of Expectant and Parenting Youth - Title IX

Help for Staying in School

Being an expectant or parenting young person requires special services that are sometimes difficult for schools to provide. Because of this, pregnant and parenting young people can be treated differently, but not in a good way. Examples might be not being allowed to play a sport because you are a parent or not being allowed to make up work that you missed because of a doctor's appointment. The government recognized a need to protect pregnant women and parents from wrongful treatment and put into law Title IX (9). Title IX is a civil rights law that prohibits unfair treatment based on sex – including pregnancy and parental status. All public schools, school districts, colleges, and universities receiving federal funds must follow Title IX.

Following the Title IX law means your school must:

- Allow you to choose whether you want to participate in special programs or classes for pregnant and parenting students if they are available. This includes homebound instruction, at-home tutoring, and independent studies. You can participate if you want to, but your school cannot pressure you to do so.
- Allow you to participate in classes, activities, and sports even though you are pregnant or parenting. You are not required to submit a doctor's note unless your school would require a doctor's note from all students who require treatment by a doctor. For students that are pregnant, at a certain point in their pregnancy it may be best or required that they stop playing sports or stop participating in certain activities.
- Provide pregnant students with reasonable adjustments like a larger desk, elevator access, or allowing them to make frequent trips to the restroom due to their pregnancy.
- Excuse absences due to pregnancy or childbirth for as long as your doctor says is necessary.
- Allow you to return to the same grade level as before your medical absences began. This includes giving you the opportunity to make up any work missed while you were out.

Helpful Tips:

- Ask your school for help. Meet with your school's Title IX Coordinator or counselor regarding what your school can do to support you to stay in school and finish your academic program.
- Keep notes about your pregnancy- or parenting-related absences, any instances of being treated differently, and your talks with school staff about your pregnancy or parenting status. Immediately report problems to your school's Title IX Coordinator, counselor, or other staff.
- If you feel your school has treated you unfairly because you are pregnant or parenting, you may file a complaint using your school's Title IX complaint policy or with the Department of Education, Office for Civil Rights (OCR).

You can learn more about how the OCR works to protect students by visiting:

Help for Family Planning

The Title X (10) Family Planning Program is a federal grant program that provides family planning and preventive healthcare, like testing and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), birth control, and pregnancy services. These services are provided in local health departments, health centers, and some other medical offices for people who couldn't otherwise afford such health care services on their own.

How This Applies to You

It will be important for you to think about whether you'll want to have another baby soon, or perhaps wait a while. Your doctor is a great person to talk this over with to help you make a plan for either option. However, you can also seek family planning services or birth control through any health clinic that uses Title X funds. Under Title X you do not need your parent's permission to receive birth control and the services are provided confidentially (or privately).

In Mississippi, Title X-funded health centers provide:

- Pregnancy testing
- Birth control
- Pelvic exams
- Screenings for high blood pressure, anemia, and diabetes
- Screenings for STDs
- Health education
- Referrals for other health and social services
- Reproductive life plan counseling
- Emergency Contraceptive Pills

All health department clinics in Mississippi are Title X sites and provide these services. You can also find other options for Title X-funded health centers in Mississippi by visiting <http://www.teenhealthms.org/find-healthcare>

Contraceptives 101

Emergency Contraceptives

Keeping up with your birth control can be challenging at times. If you are not currently on birth control, forget to take your birth control, or if the unexpected happens and you are no longer protected, there may still be time to prevent a pregnancy. Emergency contraception is a safe and effective way to prevent a pregnancy after having unprotected sex.

Emergency contraceptive is commonly in the form of a pill that is called the “morning after pill.” It must be taken within 72 hours of having sex. It’s important to note that the closer it is taken to when you had sex the better the chances of it preventing an unintended pregnancy.

The pill is available at all local health departments and is also sold at most pharmacies or drug stores. It can be purchased over the counter. This means you can either get the pill off the shelf or can purchase it from a pharmacy without a prescription.

Birth Control 101

Birth control is an important medical tool used to prevent things like pregnancy, heavy periods, cramping, acne, and some other things. For a person that has had a baby, it is important to think about whether they’ll want to have another baby soon, or perhaps wait a while. Your doctor will be able to help you plan for either option. It is important that a person has a discussion with their doctor about all the possible side effects and symptoms before being prescribed a birth control method so they can easily identify if the birth control is a good match and safe for them. Here are some methods of birth control. Your doctor may tell you about others.

Abstinence

Sexual abstinence is defined as not having sex, meaning no vaginal, oral, or anal sex. Abstinence is the only 100 percent effective way to protect against pregnancy and STD's, ensuring that there is no exchange of bodily fluids.

The information in this tool is informed by findings from leading public health institutions, academic studies and community-based participatory research. Only the condom protects against STDs. Talk with your provider about the best methods for you.

Contraceptives 101

IUD (NON-HORMONAL)

This method can be kept private and is good for those who cannot take hormonal birth control. It is comprised of a copper coil that is placed in the uterus.

- 99% effective
- Lasts up to 3-10 years
- Pregnancy is usually possible after removal
- Does NOT protect against STDs

Notes: May have some pain when the IUD is placed. May cause cramps and periods to be heavier and longer.

IUD (HORMONAL)

This method uses progestin hormone to prevent pregnancy and can help lighten or stop periods and may reduce cramps until it is removed. The hormonal IUD usually takes less than a minute to place into the uterus.

- 99% effective
- Lasts 3-6 years
- Pregnancy is usually possible after removal
- Does NOT protect against STDs

Notes: May have some pain when the IUD is placed. Possible spotting (light bleeding) for 3-6 months that can transition to light or no period and may reduce cramping.

IMPLANT

This method can be kept private. It uses progestin hormone to prevent pregnancy, can help lighten or stop periods, and may reduce cramps until it is removed. It is inserted in the upper arm with a device that usually takes less than a few minutes.

- 99% effective
- Lasts 3 years
- Pregnancy is usually possible after removal
- Does NOT protect against STDs

Notes: Spotting may occur for the first few months, and can transition to light or no periods. May have some pain when implant is placed. Where the device is inserted can leave a small scar, some bruising, and be sore for a few days.

The information in this tool is informed by findings from leading public health institutions, academic studies and community-based participatory research. Only the condom protects against STDs. Talk with your provider about the best methods for you.

Contraceptives 101

SHOT

This method can be kept private. It uses the progestin hormone to prevent pregnancy, can help lighten or stop periods, and may reduce cramps. The shot is usually given in the arm. This method requires going to a health clinic for a shot every 3 months to stay protected.

- 94% effective
- Lasts for 3 months at a time
- Pregnancy is usually possible after removal
- Does NOT protect against STDs

Notes: Some people experience increased appetite, weight gain, headaches, depression, and slight bruising where the shot was given.

BIRTH CONTROL RING

This method uses the hormones progestin and estrogen. It may prevent or lighten periods, reduce cramps, and help with acne. The ring only works if it is used CORRECTLY. The ring is inserted into the vagina. It may stay in during sex or be taken out.

- 91% effective (when used correctly)
- Lasts for one month
- Pregnancy is usually possible after removal
- Does NOT protect against STDs

Notes: May cause spotting for a few months, nausea, and breast tenderness.

PATCH

This method uses the hormones progestin and estrogen. It may prevent or lighten periods, reduce cramps, and help with acne. The patch only works if it is used CORRECTLY. The patch is placed on the belly, upper arm, or back and the skin absorbs the hormones.

- 91% effective
- Lasts for one week
- Pregnancy is usually possible after removal
- Does NOT protect against STDs

Notes: May cause spotting for a few months, nausea, and breast tenderness.

The information in this tool is informed by findings from leading public health institutions, academic studies and community-based participatory research. Only the condom protects against STDs. Talk with your provider about the best methods for you.

PILL

This method uses the hormones progesterin and estrogen, depending on the pill. It may prevent or lighten periods, reduce cramps, and help with acne. The pill is most effective when taken at the same time every day. When not taken regularly, the chance of getting pregnant is higher. Some medicines might cause the pill to not work for preventing pregnancy.

- 91% effective (when used correctly)
- Lasts for 24 hours
- Can become pregnant if not taken every day
- Does NOT protect against STDs

Notes: May cause spotting for a few months, nausea, and breast tenderness.

CONDOM

This method can be used to prevent pregnancy but only when used the correct way. This is also the only method that can prevent STDs when used every time and correctly.

- 82% effective
- Lasts for 1 sex act
- Must be removed carefully and away from partner to prevent pregnancy and STDs

Notes: Either partners' skin may have an allergic reaction to latex. If so, use a condom made from a different material that protects against STDs. Not all condoms protect against STDs.

Teen Health Mississippi's mission is to ensure that all Mississippi teens have access to high-quality sex education and youth-friendly healthcare services. Teen Health Mississippi envisions a healthier Mississippi where youth have access to essential knowledge, skills, resources, and support so they may grow into healthy adults and move Mississippi forward.

This guide is dedicated to finding resources that will address the concerns of expecting and parenting youth, and to help increase access to and use of youth friendly resources available in Mississippi. The development and publication of this resource guide (or directory) was supported by Award No. SP1AH000069-01-00 to the Mississippi State Department of Health (Grantee) and Teen Health Mississippi (Sub-Grantee) from the Office of the Secretary Assistant of Health (OASH), Pregnancy Assistance Fund. Its contents are solely the responsibility of the authors and do not necessarily represent the official views of OASH. The views expressed in written training materials, publications, or presentations by speakers and moderators do not necessarily reflect the official policies of the Department of Health and Human Services; nor does mention of trade names, commercial practices, or organizations imply endorsement by the U.S. Government.
